Highlights:

Leo had personal connections in both the Columbine High School massacre and the Aurora Theater Shooting, where he served in the healing process that followed.

His own mother and grandmother died in his arms in a tragic car accident. He went on to write about it in his best-selling book, Joy Comes in the Mourning: Learning to Live Again after Loss.

Aside from being an expert in grief recovery, he also speaks on his personal experiences of going from broke and bankrupt to creating a six-figure income and beyond.

He has helped a number of businesses dramatically increase their revenue and performance, while coaching individuals in creating multiple streams of income and becoming financially independent.

Recognized for his non-profit service, Leo was honored with the 7 Everyday Hero award (ABC-TV and Comcast) and the President's Lifetime Call to Action award, presented by President George W. Bush.

His non-profit became one of the founding organizations for America Supports You, a DoD program helping military families.
